ABOUT THE SUMMIT

Domestic Violence is a critical issue that affects not only the individuals directly involved but also their families, communities, and our society at large. Domestic violence does not discriminate. It touches people across race, age, gender and religious lines and it can occur regardless of someone's level of education or socioeconomic status. Domestic violence perpetuates more violence.

The legal community plays an integral role in shaping the systems that impact survivors of domestic violence and is in a unique position to advocate for change. This summit will bring together stakeholders from law enforcement, the legal system, and social services agencies to discuss how the legal community can make a difference and support survivors of domestic violence.

ABOUT DENISE BROWN

Denise Brown is an activist who ardently speaks out against domestic violence; Ms. Brown has worked tirelessly to help pass a variety of legislative solutions for domestic violence, and she has traveled across the U.S. to speak on the issue.

After her sister Nicole was tragically murdered and Nicole's ex-husband O.J. Simpson was famously charged with her murder along with the murder of Ron Goldman, Denise is determined to do all she can to raise awareness about domestic violence.
